WHAT ISSUES SHOULD PLAN SPONSORS CONSIDER WHEN THE IMMEDIATE CRISIS ENDS?

Clive, Iowa – Kidder CEO Keith Gredys was among several retirement industry leaders interviewed by PLANSPONSOR for the publication’s April/May 2020 cover story, “The Road Ahead.” With coronavirus wreaking havoc on many businesses, employers have had little time to focus on retirement plans. But as companies begin ramping up again, there are a number of key issues that should be evaluated, going forward.

The article touches on many of these issues – including updating plan health data, weighing a 2021 match restatement, reevaluating target fund risks, enhancing Financial Wellness programs and reviewing the performance of recordkeepers and advisors.

“We’ve had a shock to the system,” noted Mr. Gredys. “Now, both plan sponsors and participants should rightly ask, ‘Am I still on track?’ ‘Did I make the right decisions about what to do during the crisis?’ ‘Do I have someone I can turn to for reliable help on plan decisions and plan work?’ At Kidder, we’re already working with clients to help them regain plan momentum.”
